The bill would create one more program of festeral grams in aid, to be calified to the 120 such programs alrectly characting $13 billion a year back to the subservient states. One section of the pressed act would involve an educational 'firill.' On the face of it, the bill bears all gado seg blues ex noisolaigel to execuse est Autodoliv

Yet in point of fact, the worder is that congress has valued so long to tadde the producious problems of highway safety and न्यान्य प्रमास्य व्यव १० विवास क्रिया हिन्दा विवास salvas bava explical no processor for congrossional action

Yet the congress solden has concerned locall with highway octory as such. Screen Reductif is determined to break through this com wall of indifference. As om of Commedicat's most able governors, in moth inginery salety a parsonal crusada. Through recently, education, stringent laws and films enforcement, he got spectacular results. Some of these same approaches are control of the bis bill.

One point of the bill would create a National Highway Tracac Safety Center, equipped to combici major programs of research and carginataling. Out of these studies would come certain andomal minimum standards for highvoy wedde softy. The assumption is that eventually these standards would be caplied to the design of outcomobiles, the engineering of highways, the flixing of speed limits, and the training and licensing of drivers.

A second port of the bill would provide from or the states, amounting to perhaps $105 million a year, to dipance new or organized programs of vehicle inspection and of driver training in the schools. It is and out of the question to imagine a day of Andreal standards for operator's permits. Speeding on a federal-aid highway may yet become a federal offense, subject to trial in federal courts. Convictions may be federally recorded as a factor in the fixing of punishment or the suspension of permitt

So it cook a freelyman congresomen to cosak out against a concion, or may other member of mangress, using Modilgh office to influence legiciation, bio our exemment, and a foreign covernment, for the private profit of a foreign lobbytca. Reconick ally cost fully realize he was violeting the most secred rule of do and coclusive club in the world—that no member of congress may criticize the contributes of any other member, no manter how much contact the public interest those activities may be.

This column has a copy of the speech which Resnick was not allowed to make about Sea. Dodd's activities. Following are come of the pardicant passages:

When I found particularly painful in these columns was the concern authenticity and documentation of the charges made. It was not easy for me to reed that a U.S. Senator accord accused of corryling out frequent applicaments for a registered foreign agent, in behalf of a foreign government; that speeches made on the floor by a common-delivered as his own-were actually within by the foreign agent; that the cenator allegedly entertalked this egent's German clients; that, or the agent's request. he made special trips to Germany, come at U.S. government expense, to help carrie Mr. Klein's business problems; that the concor helped the lobbying propagandize in the United Stones for the benefit of his foreign clients; that the cenator, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, supposedly withheld information during a committee investigation into the certivities of foreign agents-information that would have been domoging to Mr. Klein; and that the senator allegedly used Mo Ma poddon to perconally influence foreign companies to condinue their burdiesco relationables with Mr. Klein. . .

"The American people have had their faith chalten in the pact," Rep. Remick pointed out. "Only a few months ago congreen received a very bad press when armies of lobbyists inveded Capital Hill to get sugar quotas for their clients. And, of course, before that there was the Bobby Baker Deandal, which reads no further amplication from me. Over the years, influence-pedilling and conflicts of interest have always been unwelcome-but hardly unknown-intruders in Washington. . .

According to the present system, congress avoids occurinizing ito membero' activities too closely. The most flagrant violations of the public trust are overlooked, in strict accordance with proditional 'club' rules.

"This is wrong. I would like to remind every one of my colleagues that none of us is an innocent bystander. When the mud flico, it geto all of up dirty. We all live in one house, under ome roof, and we are judged collectively by the people...
"I dirmly believe," Reanick concluded, "that the time of deciaton has arrived for us to look deeply inside ourceives, individually and as a body. Past and recent events have made it clear that one congressman's ethical standard may not be quite exactly the same as another's. And so, for the protection of both of them, and for the nation as a whole, I urgently requeet at this time that congress give priority attention to the establishment of a code of ethical behavior for the guidance of
